Thru the indomitable "I Will" spirit of an ambitious and progressive young business woman, Tinley Park had a real Fourth of July celebration and parade after all.

Last Friday when an item appeared in the Tinley Park Times that there would be no Fourth of July celebration in that town, Mrs. Pearl Boldt was very much disappointed, but then the thought came to her "Why not put on a celebration yourself?" She immediately got busy and took the matter up with a number of Tinley Park organizations and after being assured of their support she then engaged the Saenger Hall and the Linden Garden. Next she visited the News-Bulletin office at Mokena and ordered posters and hand bills. The posters were delivered the same evening and by mid-night Mrs. Boldt had most of the posters up and finished her publicity work Sunday.

Well when the time came for parade there was a good crowd in Tinley Park and cars were parked on both side of Oak Park avenue to the north village limits. The parade was headed by Mayor Chas. F. Nielsen riding in an automobile. Those taking part in the parade were: Tinley Park Legion Post, Legion Auxiliary, Junior Legion Post, Baseball team, Niagari Girls Club, Tinley Royal Neighbors, Junior Garden Club, Tinley Park Garden Club, Tinley Park Dairy, Tinley Park Pharmacy, English Bros., Garage, Tinley Park Fire Department, Tinley Park Bakery and the Mokena Motor Sales.

Farm Bureau Team Defeats The Spry Democrats 10 to 0

The Will County Farm Bureau baseball club handed the strong Will County Democrats (1933 county champions) the worst shellacking they have received during their existence, by a score of 10 to 0 at Frankfort, last Sunday afternoon, before a crowd of 1000 fans. "Lefty" Schult held his opponents to 3 scattered hits, and whiffed six batsmen, allowing only one player to reach third base, who was immediately picked off. Bob Hohenstein caught one of the most brilliant games ever witnessed in this county. The turning point of the game actually started in the second inning when Dreckler blasted a triple to deep right center with the bases full, and was immediately sent home on a single by Brockmiller, which by the way was the last of Bill Steen, the starting hurler.

Alex Fier, the ace of the staff, then took up the mound duty. The Farm Bureau boys took picks on his delivery in the fourth inning when four hits, including doubles by Dreckler, Kohl, and Fehland, and a single by Palmer accounted for three tallies, all solid hits. Things were rather quiet for the first time since the game had started until the eighth inning, when two singles by Adams and Brockmiller, and a double by Palmer, produced two more runs for a total of ten for the day.

Sunday, July 8, a four-team, three-game tournament, the first of the season, will be played at Frankfort, starting at 1 p. m. standard time. The teams competing are: Mokena, Tinley Park, Peotone and Farm Bureau. Fans come out and enjoy these fine games. A small admission price will be asked for this tournament.

Old Time Marley Resident Dies

Mr. Andrew Pearson, 91 years old, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Louis Nelson Sunday noon after a short illness caused by a fall.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock at the Nelson home. The Rev. E. L. Snodgrass officiated. Burial was in the Maplewood Cemetery in New Lenox.

Mr. Pearson was born in Sweden on September 18, 1843. He married Miss Anna Olson on June 18, 1873 and came to this country in September, thirteen years later. They settled in Marley where they made many friends. Mr. Pearson's wife preceded him in death sixteen years ago and since then he has been cared for by his daughter, Ellen Nelson.

He is survived by two daughters, Anna Long and Ellen Nelson; six grandchildren, Leslie, Earl and Mildred Long and Francis, Gladys and Alvin Nelson; and by three great grand children, Dolores, Donald and Gordon Long.

Personal Tax List

The annual personal property assessment list of Frankfort township appears in this issue. Read it over carefully and you can check up on your personal property tax.

Owing to the last minute rush, no music was available but that had to be overlooked.

The line of march was from the Klepper corner north of Tinley Park down Oak Park avenue to Kirchen street and then to the Saenger hall where the parade disbanded. Here the judges which Mrs. Boldt had appointed awarded the two cash prizes of $5 each which Mrs. Boldt donated. One prize of $5 cash was awarded to the Niagari Girls Club for having the best float and the other prize of $5 in cash went to the Tinley Park R. N. A., for having the largest marching body.

At the Linden Garden there were all kinds of games and plenty of eats and drinks. In the evening there was a fire works display. A dance was also held that evening in the Saenger Hall and was well attended.

The many friends of Mrs. Boldt admire her for her pluck and she certainly is to be commended for her fine civic spirit. It CAN BE DONE if the right effort is exerted.

Mrs. Boldt operates the former Dini Ice Cream parlor and is the local business manager of the Tinley Park Times.

Mr. Boldt must not be left out of the picture, for he too, did his part to make his energetic wife's plans go over. Mr. Boldt is the well known sign painter and window trimmer of Tinley Park.

Baby "Twister" Visits Mokena

Mokena was visited by a young tornado last Friday morning. The storm coming from the northwest, broke suddenly about 8 o'clock. A furious wind of "twister" proportions struck the northeast side of Mokena. At the H. S. Schiek farm on Wolf road a garage was moved and twisted out of shape. At the J. V. Hall place also on Wolf road a big tree was blown over against a well house and another big tree almost uprooted. At the Lawrence Kohl farm quite a number of trees were blown over, but some of them not being uprooted, were saved.

On the Henry Yunker east of the Kohl farm, shingles were ripped from a barn.

A huge tree standing in front of the George Marti residence back of the old school, was blown down and thrown across the street.

Byron Nelson was engaged in wrecking the old school when the storm broke. Shingles, laths, and pieces of lumber filled the air for a few seconds. A cover on the back of his car was blown over to the Rock Island tracks. He sought shelter from the storm at the Conoco Oil station across from the Rock Island school house road crossing.

A veritable cloudburst followed the blow. About a mile south of Mokena the sun was shining.

Rain fell as far east as Tinley Park.

Alpine Depot To Be Sold

The old Wabash railroad depot which has been a landmark at Alpine for many years and which has not been in use for seven or eight years, is going to be sold to the highest bidder for cash by the railroad. A. C. Kay, Wabash agent at Orland Park is receiving the bids. All bids must be in by July 13. A good sized coal shed also goes with the depot.

Mrs. Mary Storm was the custodian of the depot for a number of years. The removal of the depot will just about remove the last trace of Alpine that at one time threatened to rival Mokena.

Mokena Board Appropriates $3800

The Mokena village board at their meeting Tuesday night passed their annual appropriation bill to meet the running expenses of the village government for the ensuing year. The sum of $3800 was appropriated. The appropriation ordinance is printed on page 7 of this issue.

Orland Park Boy Makes Good

Word was received at Orland Park the past week that Lt. W. C. Bischoff has been appointed instructor at the C. M. T. Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wisconsin by the U. S. War Department.

PASTORS SAY CHURCHES MUST BE UNITED

Pointing out that the very life of the Protestant church is at stake and that the crying need of the hour is unity and the merging of sickly church groups, visiting pastors at the church merger program held at the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena last Sunday evening did not mince words in discussing the problems of the church of today.

Rev. Mr. Blasberg of Manhattan Evangelical church spoke in the German language. He was very emphatic in stating that the Protestant church as a whole was suffering from lack of unity, that there is too much bickering over hair splitting differences which in the long run do not mean anything. He said that hate and discord come from the devil. He pointed out that in order for the Protestant church to become strong all the small, weak groups must merge with the stronger ones. He predicted that the day is coming when there shall be but one church and it will be in keeping with the biblical passage where Christ speaks of the Father being in him and he in the Father and that both are one.

Rev. Mr. Blasberg further stated that there are instances where one minister would not shake hands with another one because that good brother did not belong to the same denomination. This, he said, was not Christian, for Christ did not say preach the gospel to a certain sect or group but urged his followers to preach the gospel to all the world.

Rev. G. Gerhold, pastor of the St. Peter's Evangelical church at Frankfort said the merger of the Evangelical churches at Cleveland, Ohio the past week, made church history and that the merger was being watched thruout the country.

Rev. Mr. Gerhold pointed out that in the smaller communities one good strong united church can do more good than can four separate denominations, who oft times are so weak that they cannot pay the pastor's salary. He called particular attention to three Protestant churches being grouped together in one square in Mokena.

He too, pointed out that the denominations must quite fighting among themselves over inconsequential things and must stand united if the church is to receive the proper recognition in the world.

Rev. Mr. Gerhold showed that if the church had not failed to do its duty in 1914 and 1916 the world and this country in particular would not have to face present distressing conditions. He declared the church during the war years sanctioned war and was suspicious and that churches of English and of German extraction were distrustful of one another due to the poisonous propaganda that was spread among them.

Unity and the preaching of the gospel as directed by Christ was the undercurrent of the program and the pastors all stressed the fact that the recent church merger will be a blessing and will make the Evangelical denomination nearly a million strong. The fast was given much stress that both denominations have discarded those things on both sides which kept them apart before the merger.

Rev. Mr. Webbink of Green Garden and Rev. Mr. Deckinger, retired pastor, now a resident of Mokena also took part in the program.

Miss Florence Harnack and brother Clarence sang a duet. The choir of St. John's sang an anthem.

The orchestra of St. Peter's Evangelical church of Frankfort furnished the musical part of the program and all present appreciated and enjoyed their offerings much.

Mrs. Biblikopf, sister of Rev. Theodore Lapp, former pastor of St. John's and now of Michigan, sang a solo.

Rural Carriers To Picnic at Mokena

The rural letters carriers of Will County and the southern part of Cook County will be entertained at a picnic this coming Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Folkers on the vacant lot adjoining their residence in Mokena. About 75 guests are expected. Rural carriers and their families outside of Will County will be present from Orland Park, Palos Park, Tinley Park, Matteson, Harvey and Homewood. Mr. Cooper treasurer of the national organization will be present and tell of the mile rate of pay as passed by the last Congress.

Ants Battle

That ants are good for something is being discovered by farmers in the vicinity of Orland. They claim that the ants are deadly enemies of the chinch bugs and devour them.

Some farmers try and get all the ants they can to fight the chinch. It is said that the ants will not harm the grain.

To Change Rating of New Lenox Post Office

Postmaster Ellis J. O'Daniel at New Lenox, faces a salary cut beginning July 1.

The reason for the cut is the fact that the New Lenox post office, effective the beginning of the new fiscal year, is to be relegated from the third class to the fourth class.

The relegation of the New Lenox office was ordered because of declining postal receipts at that office postal officials say.

At the present time Postmaster O'Daniel is getting a salary of $1100 a year. For the fiscal year 1935, which begins July 1, his salary will be based upon stamped cancellations at his office. The exact amount he will get, cannot therefore be determined in advance, but it is certain to be less than his present salary, which is fixed, post officials said.

As a third class post office, the New Lenox office had its postmaster appointed by the President. As a fourth class office it comes under the exclusive jurisdiction of the postmaster general whose appointments do not require senatorial confirmation. If Postmaster O'Daniel does not wish to accept the pay cut which goes into effect with relegation of his office to the fourth class, a new postmaster will be named by Postmaster General Farley, officials say.

Toward the close of the 1935 fiscal year, treasury auditors will make a new computation of the postal receipts of the New Lenox office and if a sufficient increase has been shown, the office will be restored to the third class and the postmaster's salary increased accordingly, officials say.

Exchange Vows at Pretty Wedding

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Huhnstock, of Tinley Park, Saturday, June 23rd at five o'clock when their daughter Hilda became the bride of Alexander Besspalko of Winnipeg, Canada. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wm. Greve.

The home was beautifully decorated with flowers and greens. A heart, shaped of greens, was placed on the floor in which the bride and groom stood during the ceremony.

Mr. Walter Schmidt played the Lohengrin wedding march for the procession.

First to enter were the best man, Michael Besspalko and the groom. Both wore dark suits. Next entered Carolyn Huhnstock, sister of the bride, wearing a gown of yellow embroidered organdy, floor length, white shoes and tea roses. Next entered the bride and her father. The bride wore embroidered white organdy with a train, white shoes and carried a bouquet of tea roses and baby breath.

After the ceremony Mrs. Wm. Greve and Mrs. Water Schmidt sang "The Lord is My Shepherd". The large and roomy basement was beautifully decorated in yellow and white. A long table was spread to seat about forty people. A delicious dinner was served to about 65 people.

The bride received many beautiful gifts. The bride and groom left for a honeymoon to Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, the Twin Cities and many other points in Minnesota and Iowa. They expect to be gone for about four weeks. When they return they will make their home with the bride's parents for the time being.

The guests from a distance were: Mrs. Charles Weber, Charles City, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Loebe and Wm. Witt of Hammond, Ind.

A host of friends extend to the young people congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy wedded life.

Orland Park Legion Post Plans Picnic

In addition to the floats there will be several drum and bugle corps in the parade. There will be dancing on an open air dance floor afternoon and evening. Watch for more particulars.

Frankfort 4th Dance A Big Success

TO SELL THRESHING MACHINE

The Bauch Threshing Co., will sell their threshing machine at auction, Saturday, July 14. Chas. Erickson will be the auctioneer.

$10,000 FIRE DESTROYS NEW LENOX LANDMARK; MOKENA FIRE DEPARTMENT CALLED OUT

A fire supposed to have been caused from a burning Fourth of July balloon lighting in the gutter and burning thru the roof, destroyed the former Orandie Page residence north of New Lenox on Cedar street Wednesday night. The property now owned by Mrs. Howard Francis was occupied by a family by the name of Fowler. The members of the family were awakened by the smoke.

As New Lenox has no fire department efforts were made to get the Joliet Fire Department chemical truck, but owing to a big fire in Joliet at the same time that department could not respond so the Mokena fire department was called, but the flames got such rapid headway it was impossible to save the place. The Hickory Creek is south of the place but this water was too far to pump to the fire. The building had been stuccoed and burned slowly. The furniture was nearly all saved. The damage is estimated at $10,000 covered by insurance. The property was an old landmark of New Lenox part having been built over 65 years ago.

Fire Chief Herman Schweser of Mokena was injured when a hatchet he was using in chopping away some shingles missed and slashed the thumb on the left hand to the bone.

The fire was announced at a dance at the Colonial dance hall in New Lenox and a large crowd at once went to the scene of the fire.

Idea of Mokena Man Becomes Reality

About 18 months ago the News-Bulletin carried an article about a project under consideration for the employment of some 5,000 actors, musicians and performers to present free entertainment at the 1,000 camps of the government employees, 250,000 laborers on forest preserve and reclamation activities.

Don C. Hall of Mokena is the author and promoter of the idea and the following article appearing in the Chicago Tribune under date of June 28th, 1934 shows that the idea has materialized:

"The Illinois Emergency Relief commission has approved work relief assignment of 264 idle actors and singers and 100 musicians to entertain persons in public institutions, hospitals, CCC camps, schools and other public and philanthropic institutions. Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the commission, who announced the project said it was designed to stimulate culturally those whom adversity has deprived of such diversion.

"The project is to get under way Monday by organizing actors and musicians into suitable groups for immediate rehearsals.

"Sixty of the 100 musicians, according to Secretary Reynolds, will form two bands of 30 members each, one to give concerts at state institutions and the other at county institutions."

Marley Has 52nd

Fourth Celebration

Marley put over its fifty-second annual Fourth of July celebration with its usual pep. A comic parade brought forth many a laugh. Marley's town council was a scream. A mock wedding also was solemnized.

Following the parade a picnic was held in the Storm grove. Rev. Henry L. Rust former Marley pastor, now of Iowa was the speaker of the day.

Several hundred people attended the celebration.

Mokena Aces Beat Colored Giants

The Aces won another game Sunday beating the Colored Giants 14 to 0. The boys all started hitting early in the game. Gilmore smacked out a home run with Martie on base and from then on it was merely a slaughtering game for the Aces. The colored lads were really upset and could not get started. Patty struck out 16 of the boys and made them look sick doing it. Cappel tried to duplicate Gilmore but he could only get a triple. This was the first game that the new score board was used and it met with a great success with all those present. Well folks, the Mokena team has not let you down yet.

Flame of the Border

SYNOPSIS

Seeking death by throwing herself from the summit of Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly sobered and repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother, his wife, Lila, and their small daughter, Babs. For a year she has been engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding. Sonya pulls Little Moon, wife of Two Fingers, a Navajo, through the crisis of an illness. Two Fingers is deeply grateful. Blake returns to New York, declaring he will give Sonya six more months and then demand she keep her promise to marry him. Sonya again meets the man whose advances she had repulsed on Lone Mesa. He tells her he bitterly regrets his action. Sonya is affected, but unforgiving. She hears rumors of a Border bandit "El Capitan Diablo," who crucifies his "double-crossers" and vaguely connects him with her attacker.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"No, maybe not—know'n' you, I know not. But I think you were wrong, Sonya, even so. Whatever might have happened to you would have been outside your power to prevent, no fault of yours. An' think what a ghastly waste it would have been—your broken body at the Mesa's foot—your kindly soul gone from this earth which needs such so bad. No," she finished, shaking her head, "you should not have tried to kill yourself."

"Well," the girl laughed, "I didn't, so that's that. And, Myra, I wish you could have seen his face. I never saw a drunken man get sober so fast in my life."

"What did he look like?" asked Myra curiously. "Was he a cowboy?"

Sonya considered. "Well, he was dressed like one, yet I wondered what outfit he could work for, since we're all sheep over there, you know. And he was good to look at. Tall and slim hipped, with the strangest long blue eyes I ever saw. Odd eyes that could change in a second. They were fierce at first, like a hawk's, reckless and selfish. They made me furious just to look at them. And then, when he saw I was in dead earnest about—about—this thing—they turned perfectly terrible with anxiety, like a man's who sees a child dying and can't help, if you see what I mean. Well, anyway, it's ancient history, and I hope I never lay eyes on him again, the good-for-nothing. And now tell me about yourself. How's the ranch going?"

And Myra fell into the usual train of trivial happenings which had filled the recent months, as the afternoon wore away and the sun went down the west.

It was twilight when they came out into the ranch yard, and some one was coming into the round stockade corral where the big tanks shimmered under their sweet waters from the well under the windmill. This was a strange creature if ever there was one, that sat wearily on his little gray burro, leading another and hazing a third ahead of him—a thin, stooped figure in rusty black garments that bore about them something of the dignity of chancel and sacristy. A wide-brimmed black hat sat squarely on the head of long white hair that fell in dusty ringlets to his shoulders. The tired burros drank as if famished, and the master stepped off the one he rode, standing patiently beside it while it slaked its thirst.

Myra laid down her pan and went toward this newcomer, her hand extended.

"Hello, sir," she said, "We're glad to see you. There's plenty of feed in the barns yonder. Put up your stock an' come on in. Supper'll soon be ready."

"Good day, my daughter," said the old man, shaking hands with her. "I'm glad to be here, too. The road is long sometimes. I've come from Juniper Tank today."

"Whew!" whistled Myra. "That is a long trail, an' a hard one, especially for burros."

"Oh, they do well, my little fellows. They're true servants of the Word, never complaining, always willing. Their reward is certain, I'm sure. If I weren't, I'd be unhappy: they are so patient, so gentle."

He looked at Myra anxiously with his faded old dark eyes.

"Sure," said the woman hastily, "sure they'll be rewarded. Just as sure as anything."

The Servant smiled relievedly. "I knew you'd understand, Mrs. Little," he said. "Some people don't. They smile when I tell them that. Now I'll go put up."

A little later they all sat down to a simple meal, and Sonya studied him with careful glances. She had heard so much about him.

Where he had come from, the country did not know, or where he made his habitat, or if he even had one. In rain and shine, summer's heat and winter's cold, he rode the lonely stretches on his tiny mules, carrying his Bible and his first-aid kit. Many a life he had saved in emergency; many a difference he had patched up; many a bit of courage he had put in some falling heart. They called him far and wide the "Servant," shortened from "The Servant of the Lord," and he had no other name but that fantastic soubriquet. He was very old, and the rigors of his life had leached him to the bone; its pitiless suns burned his wrinkled skin to the color of old leather. But there was in his face a flame that shamed the evil out of men beholding, hard, cynical as they might be.

He was known among the ranchers half satirically, half affectionately, as the "Holy Chuck-line Rider," since he had no money ever, and could not have spent it if he had. They put him up and fed his burros, and listened quietly, these dark, hard-riding men of cattle camp and sheep camp, while he told them of their sins and the Hope of the World that never died. How much of it went in he never knew, since they are a silent lot, but it was not his job to know. That was to give the Word, that only.

So now Sonya watched him, smiling a little in gentle sympathy, and recalled the stories of his goodness and his unbounded courage which she had heard. A strange little old man, filled with undying zeal, his spirit a fire of evangel, like those amazing padres who had walked the West in an earlier day, he commanded the respect of all who came in contact with him—the gentle, mad old Servant of the Lord.

And presently Myra took them out in the sandy yard to sit about the doorway and rest with the dying day. After the manner of women in far places, she began to draw from him the news of the country.

The sun went down entirely, and the vast spread of the sandy levels clothed themselves in royal purple beyond a painter's dreams. The world was a lovely place, the Servant said in his soft old voice, fit footstool for the feet of God. There was no evil in it of itself. Only man made evil. Man, with his greed and his cruelty.

Beelzebub was abroad in the land—Beelzebub and his henchman. He had seen them with his own eyes, he the Servant of the Lord in humble places. They traveled together by night, and danger waited on them, death and danger and disaster. It had struck just across the Border in that stark form hung upon a cross. It was no common thief who rotted there in the windy sun, but one who had betrayed his master. Beelzebub himself, that master, dark and cold and wicked as infernal fire. He was a power and a force not to be reckoned with or questioned. Though several hundred miles lay between the Border and this sheltered spot, still the finger of the Wicked One could reach even here. The old man had seen shadows. Many shadows. Chief of them the Master's blue-eyed henchman. No good stayed where the Blue-eyed One went by. He had heard of him across the Line last year, the tall one with bronzed hair who was always seen when disaster was to follow. A sign and a symbol of disaster, this tall one with the wild eyes. And he had seen him three days back riding down the trail to Red Rock canyon on a horse of solid gold. So did the Wicked One mount his followers.

Well, it was growing late, and he was tired. The old were always tired. So he would find his blankets and sleep, if his friends permitted.

He rose and bowed with a lean grace, vague remnant of some forgotten time, and went away toward the camp he had made with his packs and his weary burros, and Sonya Savarin sat still in every atom of her body with a strange stillness. It seemed as if a hushing hand had been laid upon her spirit, something cold and sinister come down upon her like a cloud. Evil seemed to fall with the night and the old man's words, and presently she shivered and wrapped her arms across each other as if to shut it out. Then she shook herself and listened to Myra, who was saying how mad the Servant was. A strange old creature. Gentle and kind and quite, quite mad, so Myra thought.

But Sonya thought he was somehow akin to her in this quixotic crusade against suffering. Only he had added sin as well.

And he seemed to have a vision. It was this prophetic vision, fitting so closely with her own sense of disaster concerning certain things, which seemed to fall upon her with so chill a touch.

Piffle! She was getting old herself! It was the night and the silence of the vast country under its great stars. What were rumors of a Border bandit to her? A dark renegade who crucified his double-crossers! Nothing. She would forget the chill it gave her. She'd be all right by day.

And so she was, visiting with Myra, laughing and happy, watching the Servant ride away, his saddlebags bulging with Myra Little's generous gifts of food.

She stayed two days at the Black Sheep and left early on the third, much to Myra's dissatisfaction, who held her hand as she leaned from Darkness' saddle and talked till the last minute.

CHAPTER IV

The Spots of the Leopard.

At the home ranch Sonya found two air-mail letters from Rodney Blake which completed her entire return to the commonplace. She smiled as she read them, and for the first time it seemed as if there might be a charm or two in the great city he depicted so colorfully.

She rode over to Chee wash to see Two Fingers and Little Moon the next day and found the Indian woman up, and about the simple matters of her bogan, her rug, and her family.

It gave the girl a thrill to see her so, the flush of joy that such vindication of her work always brought. There was something in the knowledge that she had saved a life that made her one with the great work of creation itself. She was poor as the goods of this world went, they were all fairly so, Serge and Lila and Little Babs, but she felt very rich inside her, arrogantly rich, and she could smile up at the blue heavens with a secret sense of fellowship.

So she left her last instructions with the little family at the hogan, patted the cheek of the youngest round-eyed child, and rode away erect in her saddle and pretty well satisfied with herself and the world at large.

It was in this mood that she came under the tall face of Lone Mesa.

As she swung round its southeastern side, she decided to go up. The trail, cut into the sheer face by those long dead inhabitants of the pueblo, went up from here, angling sharply, and so steep that none but the level headed dared to make it. She was such, and so was the good horse under her, though they had both sweated in a cool day the first time they had attempted it.

It was a stiff and slow climb, but presently they gained the top and scrambled up through the small defile that was the steep trail's end.

As they went forward Sonya felt the surge and thrill she always felt at sight of the vast reach of the world about her, spread out so far below. Taking off her hat, she sat long in contemplation, her hands and the hat resting on her pommel.

For a long time she sat so, then reined away toward the right. She would circle the mesa, look at the silent white houses with their flat roofs, still amazingly intact, look at the great stone basin which was nearly always sweet with water caught in the yearly rains.

Presently she left the ancient tank and went on toward the north, circling the huddled houses, and was turning eastward around them when she stopped dead still.

A horse stood there in the blue shadow of the silent walls and a man sat on his haunches smoking a cigarette. The horse was golden as a raw ingot, and the man was bronzed and lean. The light of his bare head shone in the cool shade. He looked up, and Sonya looked down, and the girl's eyes dilated with a swift excitement.

"So!" she said coldly, her lips suddenly tight. "You come here again?"

The man arose, a single motion beautifully correlated.

Sonya, not conscious of what she was doing, sat looking at him, and presently he looked up at her, a straight look, humble and still.

"I—like the mesa," he said. "It's so high and austere, so far from—from everything."

At the contact of his glance the strange tense feeling which this man's presence had caused at every meeting took hold on Sonya. It was not fear—it had never been—nor repugnance, nor the anger which had stirred her, but a little of all shot through with something which she could not define, a sense of prophecy, a forecast of destiny.

It chilled her within and sent a wave of fire across the chill, and for a wild moment she felt as if the solid rock were falling away beneath her. Then she caught herself together severely and lifted Darkness' rein, and the man spoke again.

"Please," he said, "please, Miss Savarin, don't go away. I'll go right gladly."

He reached for the bridle of the golden horse and drew it to him, hesitating.

"I know I've got no right even to speak to you," he said, "or look at you after—that day up here, but if I was to be hung for it next second I couldn't help it. And I don't want to cause you another minute's trouble or unhappiness. If this here mesa's a favorite place of yours, I'll never come again. Don't stay away yourself. It's too sweet to be lost."

"But you'd lose it," Sonya said against her will.

News Nuggets From Illinois

To avoid polluting the Illinois river, officials of Hiram Walker and Sons, Inc., voluntarily have agreed to install devices for treating industrial wastes at their Peoria distillery, it was announced by the state sanitary water board. The board previously had denied the company's application to discharge untreated waste into the stream, in keeping with Governor Horner's policy of stream conservation.

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy, under Section 77 of the new corporate reorganization act, was filed in the Federal District court at Freeport by the National Lock company, whose blue eagle was ordered removed by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson last May 24.

The DeKalb county jail at Sycamore, where Jake Factor supposedly has been languishing pending his return to England to face embezzlement charges, no longer will house federal prisoners. Sanford Bates, director of federal prisoners, issued an order to this effect after hearing the allegations that Factor and Sheriff Isaac George attended a gay party in an Aurora hotel on the night of May 16.

James "High Heels" Kirby, Petersburg farmer and former state legislator, who was decisively beaten by Speaker Henry T. Rainey, Carrollton, for the congressional nomination from that district last April, plans to seek a new way to enter congress. Kirby said he would be a candidate for speaker of the house of congress and pointed out that the Constitution provides that the speaker of the house does not have to be a member of the body.

Randol Eugene Norvell, former Granite City bondsman who is serving a life term at Chester for the kidnapping of August Luer, Alton banker and meat packer, last July, is back in prison after 49 days at liberty. He escaped through a sewer. His arrest was made at East St. Louis in the home of Overton Couch, who with his wife are held on charges of aiding an escaped convict.

Plans for the annual encampment of the Illinois National Guard, including unusual arrangements for the training of guard units and related organizations, were made public by Maj. Gen. Roy D. Keehn. The encampment of the Thirty-third division will be held from August 4 to 19 at Camp Grant. The new feature of this year's training, adopted with the approval of Governor Horner, who is commander in chief of the Guard, provides for a four-day march into Chicago, the various units taking different routes but all meeting for a parade on Saturday, August 18, Governor's day at the world's fair.

Members of the Cook county board were notified that officials of the state department of highways had refused to sanction the awarding of three contracts totaling $93,043 to John M. Bransfield, paving contractor, who is now under indictment on conspiracy charges in the Criminal court. The contracts were let by the board over the protest of State's Attorney Courtney.

A state department of agriculture survey of Illinois drouth conditions shows that 32,000 farmers are in need of aid. Walter McLaughlin, director of the department, said 13,000 farmers require emergency allotments of live stock feed and 19,000 require supplies of seed. All lack financial resources and need extensions of credit, he said.

The one-hundredth anniversary of the first permanent Norwegian settlement in the United States was commemorated in Ottawa and at the village of Norway in a three-day celebration. Among the speakers were Governor Horner, Mayor Hillyard of Ottawa, and Dr. L. M. Larsen of the University of Illinois.

Declaring that the army's strength is below the "danger point" because needed appropriations have not been made by congress, Veterans of Foreign Wars at their state encampment in Galesburg passed a resolution demanding a regular force of 14,000 officers and 165,000 enlisted men. The resolution also asked that the National Guard be increased to 210,000 enlisted men, and the reserve corps to 120,000 officers, called the minimum number to meet initial mobilization. It also demanded establishment of R. O. T. C. units in colleges desiring them and asked citizens' military training camps for 50,000 youths a year. For the navy, the resolution asked immediate construction of sufficient ships to bring sea forces to treaty strength, and an increase of enlisted personnel from 79,900 to 91,400 men. Springfield's team won the drum corps contest, with Elgin second. The Dixon Ladies' auxiliary won the drill team competition, with Rockford second. Elgin's clown band was judged best. Amos M. Sharp of Decatur was elected department commander.

Telephone rates in the cities of Champaign and Urbana were ordered reduced approximately 7 per cent by the Illinois commerce commission.

Three holdup men, wearing straw hats and overalls, held up the First National Bank of Rantoul and obtained $10,000 in currency.

Melbourne Friels, twenty-year-old youth who claimed recently he had killed Louis Dal Collo, tavernkeeper, was sentenced in Rockford to one year to life in Joliet penitentiary after pleading guilty to burglary. He admitted his story of the killing was a hoax.

ASA RELIES ON GOD

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 14:1-15:15.

GOLDEN TEXT—But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased. Hebrews 13:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why King Asa Was Called Good.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Wise-Hearted King Asa.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Standing for the Right.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Courage of Conviction.

I. Asa's Reformation (vv. 1-5).

Asa was the grandson of Rehoboam. Both his grandfather and father favored idolatry, but when he came to the throne he inaugurated a campaign of reform which brought great good. He not only had the handicap of idolatry and immorality fostered by two former kings, but had to contend against the influence of his mother who encouraged immoral worship (I Kings 15:13). In order to carry out his reformatory measures he had to depose her. Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord (v. 2).

1. Cleared the land of idolatrous emblems and images (vv. 3, 5), including (a) strange altars devoted to other gods; (b) high places where unlawful sacrifices were offered; (c) the upright stones or images connected with idolatrous worship; (d) the groves which were associated with gross licentiousness.

2. Commanded Judah to seek the Lord (v. 4). He knew that if the reformation was to be effective it must be by the positive seeking after and worshiping God, accompanied by obedience to his commandments.

II. Asa's Defensive Preparations (14:6-8).

1. Built fortified cities (v. 6). He provided a general system of defense involving the cities at strategic points. He took advantage of the years of peace at the beginning of his reign to make fortifications.

2. He erected walls about the cities (v. 7). Upon these stone walls were observation towers from which the position and movements of the enemy could be seen, and from which defensive warfare could be waged.

3. Made gates and barred them (v. 7). The reason he assigns for these preparations was that they had sought the Lord. Those who really trust God will make every effort to provide defense.

4. Had an army of spearmen (v. 8). The army was made up of 480,000 brave men. The spearmen were protected with large shields and were prepared for offensive as well as defensive war.

III. Asa's Victory Over Zerah (14:9-12).

Asa's activity in providing for the national defense excited surrounding kings who interpreted his preparation as an act of aggression.

1. Asa set the battle in array (v. 10). He went out to meet the enemy. The disposition of his army shows his wisdom. Intelligent faith moves the possessor to do first that which is within his power.

2. Asa's prayer (vv. 11, 12). He cried unto the Lord, the source of national power. In this prayer note:

a. His conscious helplessness, the first requisite in obtaining help from God.

b. Appeals to God for help, knowing that with God's help they could win the victory.

c. Reposes faith in God. The word "rest" means to lean upon—to cast the entire weight upon.

d. Advanced courageously. Real faith does not wait until it sees its way clear but goes forth expecting God to clear the way.

e. He flung himself upon God. "O Lord, thou art our God." His cause was God's cause. If God has taken us for his people, and we have taken him for our God, no enemy can prevail against us.

3. The Egyptians smitten (v. 12). The enemy fled before Israel and could not recover themselves. Asa pursued them and overtook them.

IV. Azariah's Message to Asa (15:1-7).

1. The Lord is with thee (vv. 1-3). He made it clear that the Lord is with those who seek him, and those who forsake God shall be forsaken by him.

2. Be strong (v. 7). The one who is in right relationship with God and goes forth as his representative, is strong in God.

V. Asa Entering into a Covenant with God (15:18-19).

Entering into this covenant relationship meant separation from all idolatry and wickedness. Success is only possible as we seek the Lord with our whole heart.

Time for Prayer

Stop in the midst of the bustle and hurry and temptation of the day for thanksgiving and prayer; a few minutes spent alone with God at midday will go far to keep you calm in the midst of the worries and anxieties of modern life.—R. A. Torrey.

Encouragement

We have reason to be encouraged as long as we have the Spirit of God remaining among us, to work upon us, for so long as we have God with us to work for us.—M. Henry.

That Body of Yours

JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

The "New" Diet System

YOU are hearing something of a "new" system of diet whereby you do not eat meat when you eat potatoes, or you do not eat bread when you eat meat.

The reason seriously advocated by those who use this diet is that your digestive apparatus should not be asked to do too much work at one time; thus if it is digesting starch it shouldn't be required to digest proteid also.

As a matter of fact there is nothing "new" about this system; every doctor has heard or read about it for a great many years but there never was a time when it was so much discussed or used.

You may remember how the 18 day diet swept over the country leaving many invalids and causing many deaths. It would appear that this fad is also interesting a great many people, but fortunately it is not likely to cause any serious trouble.

While it must be admitted that the enzymes or ferments in the digestive juices which break up or digest foods, act differently from one another in that one acts on starches, another on proteids, and another on fats, nevertheless as they all flow together at the sight and smell of food there is always enough of them to digest a "mixed" meal.

Will this system of not eating meat or eggs with bread or potatoes help certain individuals?

Dr. Ruth F. Wadsworth, in Collier's, says that while this new system is unnecessary for the average well individual, nevertheless anyone following it really gets a good all-round "mixed" diet. "If you won't eat starches with your meal you can't eat meat alone so you add vegetables, fresh fruits and salads. And if you can't eat meat and eggs with the other two meals you are bound by variety to have stewed or raw fruits with your cereals and more salads and vegetables. Consequently you are getting more variety, more vitamins, more bulk than you ever thought you had time for before."

Now there are a number of young people who have difficulty in digesting starches, and some older people who have difficulty in digesting fats. It is in these cases that this method of taking food might be helpful.

For the vast majority of people this method is not necessary or even advisable as it gets the "mind" too much on the food, and upsets the usual household arrangements.

However it makes sure of a good all-round diet and can't hurt you if you want to try it. In fact, it may really help you.

Hay Fever Sufferers

IT is a mystery to many that one member of a family will be attacked regularly by hay fever and the rest of the family, living in the same household, breathing the same air, never have an attack.

You will admit that this is definite proof that there is something about this hay fever sufferer, something about the general condition of his body, or part or parts of his body, that gives him this tendency towards attacks of hay fever.

Dr. M. J. Gutman, Munich, states that the fact that pollen from plants put into the nose of normal persons is removed from the body unchanged, whereas in a hay fever patient sensitive to this particular type of pollen, the pollen is changed, some of it having burst, shows that the mucous lining of the nose, or the mucous (the liquid on the lining of the nose) differs from that of a normal person.

As you know the hay fever patient suffers with an inflammation of the eyes, nose, throat and bronchial tubes.

It is unfortunate that so many school teachers are afflicted with it, as it not only tires them but makes them very irritable. In addition to the symptoms in eyes, nose, throat and chest, in a number of cases there are skin eruptions such as hives (urticaria, intestinal distress and nervous symptoms).

Manufacturers of dust proof and noise proof windows are now quite widely advertising the use of these windows in relieving hay fever symptoms.

Naturally for a sleeping room, equipped with one of these devices, doors and key hole would have to be plugged, but certainly the patient should get relief during the hours of sleep, which might enable him to be fairly comfortable the rest of the time.

The treatment of hay fever continues the same, that is injections of serum, beginning two to three months before the usual attack occurs.

While this has definitely helped a great number, it has not helped others, and so other measures are found necessary—going away to a district where there is little or no pollen in the air, living in chambers or rooms a number of hours a day the air of which is kept free of pollen.

For a great number of sufferers the use of the various remedies containing adrenalin gives considerable relief.

AVERSION

By R. H. WILKINSON

©, Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

EVER since the day Adrian Lytton donned his first pair of long trousers he had been bothered by a strong dislike for little men. And with the passing of the years this attitude toward males of petite stature grew and became almost an obsession.

It was annoying, especially because Adrian couldn't tell why little men aroused in him a feeling of animosity. There just wasn't a logical explanation for the thing.

It was there, inside of him, a feeling that stirred to life whenever he came in contact with or for long was forced to gaze upon a little man.

Not that Adrian was mighty. True, at the age of twenty-seven, he stood six feet one and a half inches (without stockings), and his physique was nicely proportioned.

But he wasn't one of those big, strong, brawny brutes, who naturally regard persons of small stature with an expression of superiority.

He wasn't that sort of person. He just didn't like little men, and that's all there was to it.

This peculiar element in Adrian's makeup was asserting itself at the present moment.

He was sitting in a wicker chair placed in a tiny alcove in the auditorium of the Alpine club.

The auditorium itself, serving as a dance floor, was dimly lighted.

A hundred or more couples moved about, shuffling and scraping and jostling one another and attempting, each in their individual and original manner, to keep in time with a sobbing orchestra.

Adrian's features registered dismal gloom; an expression wholly lost upon those who chanced to look in his direction by virtue of a freakish mask, which, in contrast to its wearer's state of mind, created an illusion of silly merriment.

The event was a masquerade ball, the third annual, sponsored by the Alpine club, and the creations in costume and mask worn by participants were something to raise the flag about.

Adrian's glumness, which for the last five minutes had been developing into a burning rage, had been provoked by a youth scarcely more than five feet two or three inches tall, who, during the course of a single dance, had crossed Adrian's path twice, jostled him three times and glared at him once from behind a hideous Chinese mask, because of an unexpected collision.

There was something about the manner of this especially small youth that served to whet Adrian's already established dislike for little men.

Somewhat mere sight of the youth, coupled with memory of that ugly glare which seemed to contain a condemning look, provoked a new feeling of resentment and animosity.

He was possessed, wholly without warning, with an impulsive desire to slap the little runt down.

In fact, he actually believed that slapping the little runt down would provide him with no end of satisfaction and probably bring to a conclusion this strange aversion for little men.

But because slapping runts down wasn't being done, especially at the Alpine club's costume ball, and because Adrian couldn't find any explanation for his sudden impulse (a fact which annoyed him considerably), he hid himself to this remote alcove to cool off and think the thing over.

But even as he sat there in sober contemplation, the object of his annoyance came dancing past and tripped over his outstretched foot.

There was a breathless moment while the eyes behind the hideous Chinese mask glared at him in silent threat; while Adrian fought mightily in an effort to restrain himself from leaping at the throat of the little man. But the moment passed.

The Chinese mask danced away, and the space was filled with other dancers en route around the floor.

Adrian sat back, breathing laboriously. And suddenly he knew that he must get out of there.

He knew that if he came in contact once more with that particular little man, something was going to happen.

And so, lest this possibility should actually occur, he shoved and pushed his way to the door, through the stag line, and out on to the clubhouse veranda.

He located an isolated spot and sat down to smoke a cigarette and stare at the moon and curse himself for this affliction that tormented his soul without explanation.

And despite his best efforts he couldn't rid his mind of the idea that to slap down the little runt with the Chinese mask would cure him once and for all of his obsession.

He remembered that the little man had worn a gay Chinese costume, which could easily be distinguished after the masks had been removed during intermission.

And with a curious sense of shock he wondered if the wearer of the mask were some one of his acquaintances.

What if he turned out to be Eddie Drake or Paul Forbes, both little men, both sons of close friends of the family?

That would be bad.

No, it would never do to slap down Paul or Eddie.

Inside the clubhouse the music had stopped and the orchestra leader was bawling something through a megaphone. Adrian distinguished the word "intermission," and tore off his mask.

He sat for a long time wondering whether or not he should go back, hardly daring to trust himself for fear of what he might do should he come face to face with the little man who had trod on his toes.

Presently, however, he stood up and threw away his cigarette.

It was all foolishness, this obsession of his.

It was the result of brooding. There wasn't any excuse for a man of his intelligence to let a thing like that get the best of him.

He was going back in there, seek out the Chinese-costumed runt and shake his hand and tell him what a swell guy he was.

Hereafter, he was going to force himself to like little men.

En route back to the clubhouse door Adrian remembered that Tom Harrison, who was six feet one inch tall and whom Adrian liked, was dragging an out of town girl to tonight's ball.

Two days previous Tom had said: "Adrian, I want you to meet Bettina. She's a fine girl. You'll like her. After we unmask, you look us up and I'll give you a break."

Adrian remembered these words now and told himself that as soon as he had located the little runt he'd look up Tom and the girl.

But as the thing turned out he found Tom and the girl first.

They were standing just inside the clubhouse door, and when Adrian looked into the girl's eyes, he suddenly felt weak and peculiar inside.

She was much more than an ordinary girl. In fact, she was exactly the type of girl that Adrian had dreamed of meeting all his life. He was sure of that, even before he spoke to her.

Tom espied him and beckoned and took the girl by the arm and led her toward him.

And in that moment Adrian knew a warm feeling of comradeship toward Tom.

A man in a million. Good old Tom—

Adrian had just opened his mouth to speak when suddenly he was seized from behind.

He whirled around to stare down into a strange face, a dark-complexioned, anger-filled face; a face that fairly writhed with pent up fury.

And before Adrian had time to gather in what it was all about he was struck forcibly on the chin.

He rebounded and—collided with the wall.

Pierce anger welled up inside of Adrian, anger augmented by humiliation.

For the man who had struck him was the little runt of the Chinese costume, and the girl, the girl who was everything that Adrian had ever dreamed about, was standing there laughing because it must have struck her as funny to see the little runt slap big six-foot two Adrian against the wall.

Well, it had come.

This was the supreme moment, the moment when Adrian could punch a little man in the nose and feel justified.

He came away from the wall and struck out blindly; struck empty air.

Something hard smacked against his chin.

He rebounded again, blinked.

The little runt was standing close.

"I hate big guys," he was saying. "Hate 'em. They give me a pain. Especially big guys like you who toss us little fellows around and act so superior about it. I've been wanting to do this for a long time."

It can't be said that Adrian didn't try to defend himself. But all his efforts seemed useless.

The little runt in the Chinese costume was lightning. One, two, three. Adrian's face was a punching bag. One-two. Blood spurted from his nose. Men shouted. Women screamed.

And then suddenly it was over. Adrian lay on the floor, a bruised and bloody mess.

He was only partly conscious, but conscious enough to realize what had happened, conscious enough to see the girl, the girl he'd dreamed about, laughing as if she'd burst a blood vessel.

Adrian didn't try to get up.

He lay there for a long time thinking.

"I hate big guys." He could hear the words again. And suddenly he grinned.

He was glad it had happened, glad the girl was there to laugh.

Glad because he no longer possessed the desire to slap down little men, no longer disliked them.

He was cured of his obsession.

He knew that little men bothered him because of their apparent physical inferiority, and that little men had been bothered by him because of this apparent physical superiority—a theory which had just now been proven all cockeyed.

"Eat" and "Eet"

In the United States, the past tense of the verb to eat is rarely heard other than ate, pronounced to rhyme with late, gate, mate, says Literary Digest. In England the past tense appears indiscriminately as ate or eat, and in either spelling it is generally pronounced to rhyme with let, get, met. Occasionally, the form ate is pronounced in England as in the United States, and occasionally the form eat appears in the United States with the pronunciation et.

Bridges' Part in Warfare

Structures Over Which Conquering Legions Marched, and Vanquished Fugitives Fled, Figure on Almost Every Page of History.

For a long time the River Danube, of waltz fame, had been flowing peacefully by the busy, industrial town of Linz, in upper Austria. Across the bridge there that spans its gray-green, not "blue," waters, orderly traffic daily shuffled.

Suddenly, as civil war flamed over the country, the Linz bridge changed from trade artery to battle ground. Machine-gun fire sputtered from its sides as Socialists desperately tried to hold their line against government troops. On shore howitzers were wheeled into position and the big guns spoke, while rifles and machine guns raked the water.

Farther downstream, at Vienna, there was more activity on the Danube, as soldiers poured across the river against rebel suburbs, taking cover behind pillars of the bridge to avoid snipers. On another bridge, Socialist leaders stood with ammunition and guns to distribute to all who would accept. And nearby, government engineers worked hurriedly on the emergency pontoon bridge that would facilitate army transport.

Such scenes from recent uprisings in Austria remind one that bridges and rivers have known many tragedies and always play an important part in war.

"If I had had ten pontoons," wrote Napoleon in 1814, "I should have captured 10,000 wagons, beaten Prince Schwarzenberg . . . and closed the war. . . ."

Hundreds of years before Christ, the Persian King Xerxes, enraged at the storm that destroyed his boat bridge over the Hellespont, ordered the waves lashed and pontoon builders executed. Then, across another stronger bridge, he marched his powerful army against Greece.

Many old bridges, still standing, were under foot when history was made, dripping with the blood of conqueror and vanquished. The bridge of St. Angelo at Rome is one such. Over it Goths and Vandals came—and went. In its time the Coliseum crumbled.

In the Middle Ages, practically all important bridges were scenes of bitter conflict. Fortified construction was the order of the day. Bridges with thick stone gateways and towers were built to withstand siege. Many had openings for crossbow men to shoot through and ledges over which hot oil could be poured on the heads of enemies.

Old London bridge, started in the Twelfth century, had such heavy stone arches and huge piers that it was dangerous to sail between them. Men used to say "London bridge was made for wise men to go over and fools to go under." But not too safe at that for wise men, as numerous struggles and disastrous fires testified. Once several thousand people were trapped on this old causeway, to burn or drown, when houses at both ends caught fire.

An every-day reminder of the death meted out to bandits and traitors, human heads were sometimes prominently displayed on this old bridge, as at many such public thoroughfares. In the tower of the Karlsbrücke bridge, at Prague, Czechoslovakia, the heads of 27 Bohemian noblemen were hung in iron cages, after their defeat in the battle of White mountain in 1620.

Those days have gone forever. But people still shudder at some memories that cling to bridges. There was the Philippine insurrection that occurred on San Juan bridge, near Manila, and the fairly regular shooting by armed guards of Chinese boatmen who—inadvertently of otherwise—came too close to the Harbin bridge over the Sungari river in what was then Manchuria.

Closer home, the Indian massacre at the bridge of Deerfield, Mass., in 1703, and the encounter of Washington's Continental troops with the British at Jeffrey's ford on the Brandywine in 1777 are recalled.

Haunted bridges, like "haunted houses," are everywhere. They are part of the price man has paid for his progress from stepping stones to steel girders. And though such sinister names as "Butchers' Bridge," "The Priest's Widow," or the "Bridge of the Little Hell" remain, tradition also leaves pleasant and humorous memories, like the good friar in his old bridge chapel at Avignon, France, "healing the sick and maimed," or that frugal queen of the Middle Ages "Even in New England," says a who offered at the chapel of St.

Mary only six and eightpence in honor of 11,000 virgins! writer in describing covered bridges there, "It was always considered proper to steal a kiss from a pretty girl while passing through the bridge."—Washington Post.

Most Amazing Proof

OF EXTRA STRENGTH • SAFETY AND DEPENDABILITY
Ever Known!

THE NEW FIRESTONE
HIGH SPEED TIRE FOR 1934

World Record Broken

IT IS almost inconceivable that human ingenuity could build tires that would withstand the terrific punishment of the 500-mile grind at Indianapolis, May 30.

Round and round the blistering track they streaked, hour after hour, under the blazing sun . . . the low moan of powerful motors rose to a terrific roar as they hit the straightaways at 150 miles or better—grinding, pulling, pounding around treacherous tire-destroying curves faster than they ever dared before. Sliding into the turns at these terrific speeds, there was nothing to hold the car to the track except the tire.

Mile after mile, lap after lap, greater and greater heat and increased centrifugal force developed to separate the tread from the body of the tire. Every conceivable force known was working to tear the tires to pieces—yet Firestone High Speed Tires, with Gum-Dipped High Stretch Cords, withstood this most grueling test.

Thirty-three demons of speed—thirty-three cars equipped with Firestone High Speed Tires—all protected by Gum-Dipped High Stretch Cords—entered the Annual Speed Classic. Every tire was bought by the driver or owner of the car.

In all the heat—in all the grinding—in all the straining and pulling—not one cotton strand loosened—not one life was endangered by tire failure—not one car was forced out of the race by tire trouble. Six of the winners finished without a tire change. What a tribute to the Extra Strength—Safety and Durability built into Firestone High Speed Tires.

WHAT THIS MEANS TO YOU

The amazing record of Firestone dependability at Indianapolis was made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping. Every fibre of every cord in every ply of the tire is saturated and coated with pure liquid rubber; there are eight extra pounds of rubber to every 100 pounds of cotton cords.

There is greater adhesion between the plies of the Gum-Dipped Cord body and between the body and the tread. As a result of this patented process of Gum-Dipping Firestone engineers have been able to build a wider tread of flatter contour, with more and tougher rubber and deeper non-skid, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

Model Farm House

Shown at Fair

Work rooms are separated from the living quarters in the model country home at the 1934 World's Fair, making it possible for the farmer to enter from the field without going into the living rooms. A shower room is provided so that he may clean himself before venturing into the main part of the home.

Thousands of rural visitors to the Fair have inspected the home in the two weeks it has been open to the public. Questions regarding every conceivable phase of construction and decoration of the house are asked.

The home, constructed of brick, steel and concrete contains thirteen rooms and can be built anywhere in the United States at a cost of approximately $5,000. It is spaciouly designed. The rooms are comfortable and airy, and while they are adequately furnished, there is no effect of crowding.

The walls are not built brick by brick, but are constructed in sections on the ground, the bricks reinforced with steel rods and the whole bound together with mortar. Roof and the floors are also constructed in sections from steel "pans" which are bolted together and into which go concrete and insulating material. The interior walls are of celotex in most of the rooms, the celotex being either painted or papered.

Included in the house is a large garage. In addition there is a milking room, with separators, milking machines, and cooling apparatus. Four bedrooms make up the second floor of the new home, one of them opening onto a large canopied sun porch. Linoleum, in designs harmonizing with the use of the room is to serve, is used as a floor covering throughout.

The house has been built by Country Home magazine to demonstrate to farmers what the average rural dweller can do to improve his living conditions, and show that all the comforts of a city are available to the farmer at low cost, despite rural location.

Rations for Fighters

During the World war the German soldiers were supplied with tea and coffee without milk. Small rations of rum and arrack were furnished to troops in field and camp. These rations were given out in the evening to be mixed with the tea. Fifteen to twenty men received one bottle. In times of great physical exertion, the allowance of sugar was increased.

"Curtains and walls stay so clean with Gas Heat"

There's no more unnecessary dirt, soot and grime in the Hamelen home. Keeping house is so much easier. Mrs. Hamelen is proudly inspecting her walls. She says, "Curtains and walls stay so clean with gas heat."

TIRELESS EXPERTS WORKING FOR YOU

In the laboratories of Public Service Company, a corps of chemists and engineers constantly searches for new and better ways of supplying and utilizing gas. An important phase of their work is the testing of new gas ranges, water heaters, house heating equipment and all other gas appliances to insure maximum efficiency and economy for Public Service customers. They are trying out the gas ranges, water heaters, and all other gas appliances which, if they pass the acid tests, may later supply comfort in your home. The untiring research of these men has developed important manufacturing, distributing and utilization improvements. It has protected the quality and efficiency of gas appliances. It has helped save hundreds of dollars for Public Service customers.

TO TRY GAS HEAT

Gas heat can be installed without your investing one cent for equipment. To prove that every home can now afford to heat with gas, we'll install it at our expense—remove it at our expense, if you don't like it. Accept this startling offer. Phone your nearest gas office TODAY.

Del Hamelen, orchestra leader, 7719 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, doubly appreciates gas heat because it gives him more time to rehearse his band.

"I'm an orchestra leader," says Del Hamelen, 7719 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, "and I know that when I'm away in the evenings my family will be comfortable and my wife won't have to shovel coal and set dampers. Gas heat means comfort any time of the day or night."

"WE'VE got something now we never had before. We've got the ideal heat, now that we have gas heat." Del Hamelen and his family are enthusiastic about gas heat. It has brought comforts and conveniences to their home that they never thought possible. He says: "Our house is never overheated—it is always right. And there's no more running up and down stairs to fix the furnace. Gas heat means comfort any time of the day or night—yes, any time of the year."

More than 20,000 home owners in the Chicago-land area are discovering the comfort, the joy of automatic, low-cost gas heat.

To prove that every home can now afford to heat with gas, we'll install it in your present furnace or boiler at our expense. You can try it one month, two months, a year. If within the first year you find you don't like gas heat, we'll remove it at our expense and replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike order. While you are trying gas heat, you pay only $3 a month rental on the equipment in the average home, for the nine heating months. When you decide to keep gas heat, the rental you have paid applies on the purchase price of the equipment. The rental charge is included with the bill for the gas you use.

Investigate now

Now is the best time to install gas heat . . . before you order your next winter's supply of fuel. Call your nearest gas office for the facts on heating your home with gas, together with an estimate on the cost.

"Vitamins and Minerals Required for Tots," Says Diet Expert

A Substantial Breakfast Is Essential to the Boy or Girl of School Age.

By FRANCES BERKELEY FLOORE
Director of Dietetics, St. Luke's Hospital

MOST parents watch their children carefully for signs of poor physical development or a listless mental attitude, and it is true that such outward appearances do show to some extent, whether the child is thoroughly healthy; whether he is getting the proper food, rest and exercise. However, nutritional scientists and child specialists state that this is not an infallible indication that all is well. There may be as well a "hidden hunger"—a nutritional deficiency that will not evidence itself immediately but will endanger the child's future health.

This lack is most apt to be in the vitamins and the mineral, calcium. That is why scientists recommend that the foods rich in these qualities be included in each day's diet, or, in other words, that is why they say the child's daily menu should include one quart of milk; two servings of vegetables, one of the green leafy type; and two servings of fruits, one of the citrus variety; supplemented by eggs taken several times a week.

If the diet is greatly deficient in these food elements, definite physical ills such as rickets, eye trouble, nervous diseases, dental ills or scurvy may occur, and if the diet has only "just enough" of these minerals and vitamins, the child cannot attain the best health.

Each of these protective foods is Indispensable—that is, extra quantities of one that the child happens to like particularly well cannot be substituted for any one of the others and insure that the child will be adequately nourished.

For instance, the calcium which is one of the minerals most apt to be lacking in the American diet (both of adults and children) cannot be secured in satisfactory amounts in any other food except milk. About ten servings daily of vegetables and ten servings of fruits would have to be taken to get the amount of calcium equal to that in slightly more than one pint of milk or the adult's calcium need. Children require about twice this much, so it is obvious that it would be impractical to attempt to supply this particular element in any other food, especially since the quality of the calcium in other foods is not as desirable as that in milk.

This single quart of milk will also provide practically all of the individual's phosphorus requirement, a liberal amount of the Vitamins A and G, one-third or more of the protein, ¼ or more of the iron, at least ¼ of the energy and some of the Vitamins B, C and D. In the winter time the child's diet should usually be supplemented by either cod liver oil or irradiated ergosterol.

Thus it is obvious that milk, as our most complete food, is not only necessary for adequate nutrition, but also for the truest economy.

Electrical Service

Grades 95.58

In Mokena

The quality of electric service being rendered in Mokena by the Public Service Company was recently inspected and graded by engineers of the Illinois Commerce Commission and found to be 95.58 per cent perfect. This grade shows improvement over the grade of 92.21 assigned at the time of the last previous inspection by the Commission in the winter of 1932.

Electric service in the 249 larger communities served by the Public Service Company is graded at an average of 92.51 per cent by the Illinois Commerce Commission. These gradings were issued recently by the Commission according to its practice of carefully inspecting and grading utility service throughout the state at regular intervals.

In assigning the grades, the Commission engineers examine all phases of utility service including reliability and continuity, voltage regulation, handling of complaints, records of meters and tests and numerous other factors.

M. J. Musser, District Supt., of the Public Service Company, points out, that this high level of utility service was maintained in spite of various additional burdens in the form of increasing taxes, decreased revenues and expenses incident to complying with new laws and regulations imposed on utility companies.

As Grandma Used to Be

When grandmother bids little Mary act like a lady she means an old-fashioned lady.—Arkansas Gazette.

A. T. & T. STOCK IS
97% AMERICAN OWNED

Remaining 3% Is Held in 82 Foreign Countries

Although more than 97 per cent of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's stock is held within the United States, there are approximately 8,300 stockholders who live in foreign countries and in United States possessions. Eighty-two such foreign countries are represented.

There are about 3,100 A. T. & T. stockholders living in five North American countries (excluding the United States), 4,200 in 23 European countries, 625 in 17 countries of Asia and islands in the Pacific, 300 in 18 countries of Central America and the West Indies, 75 in 10 South American countries, and 25 in four African countries.

The largest number of A. T. & T. stockholders outside the United States is to be found in Canada, France and the British Isles. About 4,500, or more than one-half the total foreign holders, are located in the British Empire.

During the last five years, twenty-five countries have been added to those in which A. T. & T. stock is held. Today, no country of any importance is missing from the list except Russia.

HE HAD NO TELEPHONE—Fairmont, Minn., Sentinel

"He had no telephone at his farm. To give the alarm it was necessary to go a mile to the nearest telephone. This delay gave the fire great headway."—Quoted from a Saturday news item.

In this fire a $2,000 loss resulted, a considerable part of which might have been avoided could neighbors have been called by telephone at once. Discontinuing the farm telephone is hazardous, as many similar incidents prove.

AMERICA AND TELEPHONES—Cheyenne, Wyo., State Tribune

There are in use in the United States 17,000,000 telephones. That's 56 per cent of those in the world. The telephone is regarded as essential by the average American, other folk manage to get along with comparatively few. That's one reason why it isn't feasible to lower the American standard of living to the level of foreign standards.

FINDS FORTUNE HIDDEN IN TELEPHONE BELLBOX

Installer Restores Securities Before Owner Misses Them

A resident of Lynn, Mass., has discovered that a telephone bell box is not a satisfactory substitute for a safety deposit box.

One day recently A. E. Miller, an installer for the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, was sent to remove some telephone equipment from a residence. In so doing, he discovered in the bell box a wad of paper which aroused his curiosity. It turned out to be stock certificates worth about $2,500, including ten shares of American Telephone and Telegraph stock, fastened with three rubber bands. The installer did not discover the treasure until he had left the premises and was placing the removal tag on the equipment.

In endeavoring to trace the rightful owner, it was found that the name on the stock certificate did not correspond with the name in which the telephone had been listed. Inquiry at the head office of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York revealed the address to which the dividends for the telephone stock were sent, with the result that the stock certificates were returned to the owner before he even knew that they were gone.

List prices of commercial cars quoted are f.o.b. Flint, Mich. Special equipment extra. Prices subject to change without notice. Compare Chevrolet's low delivered prices and easy G.M.A.C. terms. A General Motors Value.

With the announcement of price reductions several weeks ago, Chevrolet stepped into the most favorable price position it has enjoyed in a long time!

Reductions amounting to as much as $50—the most substantial price cuts announced in the low-price field this year—dropped Chevrolet's base price to a new low figure of $465. Just compare this price—compare any Chevrolet price—with those of other cars. Then compare what you get for what you pay! There'll be no question in your mind which car to buy.

Chevrolet offers patented Knee-Action—and others do not! The same thing applies to Fisher body, cable-controlled brakes, shock-proof steering, and valve-in-head six-cylinder engine. Chevrolet gives you far more features—far finer quality. Yet the price of the Chevrolet Standard is lower than that of any other six or any eight in the world.

DETACHABLE CAPES MAKE FOR VARIETY

Detachable capes are so fascinating and so smart! This is a lovely dress for town wear, and it is adaptable to all sorts of occasions. It's especially attractive if made of a dotted print, as shown in the picture; but any of the checks, stripes or figured fabrics are nice for it. The dress is uniquely fashionable in that it combines tall slenderness with well-planned curves. The curved hip line is repeated by the curve of the yoke, collar and cape. Very becoming to every one!

PETER GETS ANOTHER SURPRISE

"DID you hear my cousin, Brownie the Thrasher, sing?" asked Jenny Wren of Peter Rabbit.

"Did I hear him sing?" replied Peter, his eyes shining at the memory. "He sang especially for me. He has a wonderful voice, has Brownie, and when he is singing he acts as if he enjoys it himself and knows what a good singer he is. I noticed that that long tail of his hung straight down, the same way Mr. Wren's does when he sings."

"Of course it did," retorted Jenny promptly. "That's a family trait. The tails of both my other big cousins do the same thing."

"What—what—what's that? Have you got more big cousins?" cried Peter, staring up at Jenny Wren as if she were some strange person he had never seen before.

"Certainly," retorted Jenny. "Mocker the Mocking-bird and Kitty the Cat-bird belong to Thrasher's family, and that makes them second cousins to me."

Such a funny expression as there was on Peter's face! He felt that Jenny Wren was telling the truth, but it was surprising news to him, and so hard to believe that for a few minutes, he couldn't find his tongue to ask another question. Finally he ventured to ask very timidly, "Does Brownie imitate the songs of other birds the way Mocker and Kitty do?"

Jenny Wren shook her head very decidedly. "No," said she; "he's perfectly satisfied with his own song."

"He ought to be," declared Peter. "Anyone who can sing as he can should be quite contented."

Before another word could be said, the clear whistle of Glory the Cardinal sounded from a tree just a little way off. Instantly Peter forgot all about Jenny Wren's relatives and scampered over to that tree. You see, Glory is so beautiful that Peter never loses a chance to see him.

As Peter sat staring up into the tree trying to get a glimpse of Glory's red coat, the clear, sweet whistle sounded once more. It drew Peter's eyes to one of the upper branches, but instead of the beautiful brilliant coat of Glory the Cardinal, he saw a bird about the size of Welcome Robin, dressed in ashy gray with two white bars on his wings and white feathers on the outer edges of his tail. He was very trim and neat and his tall hung straight down after the manner of Brownie's when he was singing. It was a long tail, but not as long as Brownie's. Peter blinked and stared, for he was a very much surprised rabbit.

QUESTION BOX
By ED WYNN...
The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have just written a song. The lyrics are very sad. They are about a young man telling how he made love to a young girl and of her promise to marry him, then on the day before the wedding she tells him she will not marry him because she found out he didn't have any money. Will you please give me a suitable title for my song?

Yours truly,
ART ISTICT.

Answer—The best title for your song (according to the above description) would be "She Looked Me Up in Bradstreet's, Now I'm Dun."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Is it true that a Scotchman "loves HIS whisky?"

Sincerely,
JACK KNIFE.

Answer—It is true that he loves whisky, but not "his." He loves someone else's.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a young lady 22 years of age and considered very pretty. I am keeping company with three young men about my own age. Is it all right for me to go with three different fellows?

Yours truly,
I. M. A. FLIRT.

Answer—It is not all right if the other two find it out.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

In the government income tax notice, mention is always made of "A Full Return." What do you think that means?

Sincerely,
D. LINQUENT.

Answer—To me "A Full Return" always means when a man comes back home drunk.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I hear a great deal of talk about "Mermaids." I don't believe there are such things, do you? If so, maybe you

A ROOM IN A HOSPITAL

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SEEN in the morning light, the creamy walls are tinged with the faint luster of the dawn.

Outside my room, a rustle in the halls whispers another night has come and gone.

The rattle of the trays proclaims the hours. As steadily the day moves into night. . . . There may be visitors, new books, bright flowers. To touch the heart with exquisite delight.

There are good thoughts to share in spite of pain. New friends to make, old friends to greet once more; A slow advance toward health and strength again. To meet that strange old world outside my door.

But in the meantime, my affection holds. One world alone. . . . The sunlight speeds the gloom. As I lie here, while all my love enfolds My world. . . . the narrow walls of one small room. . . . Copyright.—WNU Service.

Boil together for ten minutes: cool and put into a bottle in the ice chest. When serving pour a tablespoonful or two of the sirup into a glass, add chipped ice with cold water and serve at once. This is so good and is always ready to serve at a moment's notice.

Lemon Soup.

Add the juice and grated peel of a lemon to four cupfuls of water, bring to a boil and thicken slightly with three teaspoonfuls of arrow root mixed with a little cold water. It is better to add the juice of the lemon without cooking, just as it is served.

Mint Sangaree.

Crush three sprigs of mint with a lump of sugar, drop into a glass half full of cracked ice. Add four tablespoonfuls of grape juice and fill the glass to the brim with charged water. Shake thoroughly and strain into another glass. Serve garnished with a sprig of mint.

Chicken a la Stanley.

Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one large onion thinly sliced and two broilers cut into pieces for serving. Cover and cook slowly for ten minutes. Remove the chicken, rub the stock and onions through a sieve and add one and one-half tablespoonful each of butter and flour cooked together. Add cream to make the sauce of the right consistency, season well and serve poured over or around the chicken on a hot serving dish. Garnish with sautéed bananas.

Model Farm House of the Future

ILLUSTRATING the changes in American living conditions, this model farm house erected by The Country Home, a national farm magazine, attracts much attention at the World's Fair in Chicago. It is in a beautifully landscaped lot adjoining the dairy exhibits. New ideas are embodied in its construction, which is of brick, steel and concrete. The lower floor contains living room, kitchen, laundry, wash room, farm office, work shop and two-car garage. The upper floor has four bedrooms and bath, plus a "roof deck" over the entire garage. The brick used is reinforced with steel rods, precast in panels, and set in place much as the so-called fabricated houses are built. The house is fireproof and can be built for less than $5,000. As shown at the World's Fair, it is completely equipped with all modern improvements. The house has no cellar, its architects maintaining that a cellar is obsolete and expensive.

Busy Potato Flea Is Easily Halted

Sprays and Dusts Are Best Suited for Control of Bothersome Pest.

The potato flea beetle is a tiny, plump, shiny black insect about as long as the diameter of the lead in a pencil and slightly narrower in width. The presence of flea beetles may be easily detected by the peculiar perforated appearance of the injured foliage. In cases of serious damage to leaves by this pest, says a writer in the Wisconsin Agriculturist, the leaves look as if they had been riddled by shot. The beetle hops like a flea which gives it its name. During the warm days of June and July is the time to watch for this pest and use the sprays and dusts best suited for its control. Flea beetles feed on a large variety of plants, but are most troublesome on cucumbers, potatoes, tomatoes, egg plants, radishes, and cabbage, and are believed to be responsible for the spread of certain diseases. In July or August a second brood may play havoc with potatoes, tomatoes, and egg plants.

Fortunately flea beetles dislike leaf surfaces covered with any foreign material, such as sprays or dusts; and if treatments are made before serious injury occurs and if the leaf surfaces are thoroughly coated, the insects are easily held in check. Since the adults appear suddenly and work fast, it is important to keep a close watch on the field or garden to detect the first signs of invasion.

Calcium arsenate in bordeaux mixture is regarded as the safest and most effective spray, while tobacco dust with lime of a calcium arsenate and monohydrated copper sulfate dust with lime are recommended among the dust preparations.

Leaf Hopper Is Blamed for Stunting Alfalfa

The yellowing and stunting of the second growth of alfalfa so prevalent last year was not due to "sun burn" as commonly anticipated but to an insect foe of alfalfa, according to L. F. Graber, University of Wisconsin authority on alfalfa.

"This insect, the leaf hopper," said Graber, "is a tiny but potent foe of alfalfa, causing stunting and marked yellowing of the second growth, yet infestations and injury are easily controlled. Our findings have definitely shown that the simple expedient of delayed cutting of the first crop is the effective remedy."

It is hard to believe but nevertheless true that a matter of deferring cutting of the first growth from six to twelve days will increase the seasonal yields by as much as a ton per acre because it reduces the number of leafhoppers that will appear in the next growth, Graber asserted.

Leafhoppers do not appear in the first growth until spring and by deferring the cutting until about the end of June the insect will lay the bulk of its eggs in the first growth so that they may be removed in and with the hay. This protects the next crop, he declared.

Clean Farming Kills Bugs

The most effective way of combating insect pests in large fields, where high costs may prohibit the use of insecticides, is to follow good farm practices, which call for clean fields, properly prepared and fertilized seedbeds, and tested seeds, says Lee A. Strong, federal entomologist. These methods may halt an outbreak at the start, and also encourage the growth of robust plants more capable of resisting insect attack. Simple changes in routine farm operations which deprive insects of food or shelter at critical periods in their life cycles also play an important part in this war.

Producing Milk

Several hundred cow-testing association records from Indiana herds show that on the average it takes 54 pounds of silage, 26 pounds of hay and 32 pounds of grain to produce 100 pounds of milk with the average 400-pound cow, states G. A. Williams, Purdue university. At present feed prices the cost is approximately 44.8 cents. With the average 200-pound cow it takes 81 pounds of silage, 48 pounds of hay and 42 pounds of grain for 100 pounds of milk.

Wood for Fuel

Many farms have a good woodlot that provides an ample supply of fuel for winter needs. Some of these are being destroyed through improper cutting. Trees which are defective, trees which overtop valuable young growth and softwood trees which have little value for lumber should be used for fuel. A crooked stick burns as good as a straight one and good trees should be left for timber and should be given every possible chance to develop.

Traveling Farm School

Because of the success of the tour of the Better Farming train, which has ended in Australia, the traveling exhibition and school will make regular journeys hereafter. Crowds gathered at every stopping place, and the lectures were well attended. The train consisted of 18 cars, two being equipped for talks and lectures. The passengers comprised all animals and birds known to farming, together with experts in every branch of the industry.

YEAR OF DRYNESS

Perhaps 1934 will be known in history as the year of the drought. Abnormally dry weather prevailed over Central Europe and in early June it damaged German crops to a minimum of 25 per cent. In England more than 160 rural areas were short of water and the rainfall for the year ending May 31 was the lowest ever recorded. The level of the Thames fell so much that fish were landlocked in many backwaters.—Literary Digest.

MANY REUNIONS MARK CHICAGO FAIR EXHIBIT

Souvenir Calls Bridge Time and Space for Visitors at Bell System Demonstration

"It was the most thrilling part of my visit to the Fair."

The speaker was a Brooklyn, N. Y., woman, and she was referring to one of the souvenir telephone calls which proved to be a big feature of the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago. Visitors from all over the country took advantage of the opportunity offered by the Bell System to telephone to some distant city, and marvelled anew at the speed and clarity of the service.

Map Shows Path of Call

These souvenir telephone calls were given without charge to visitors in the Communications Hall. Persons who desired to make a call filled out a card, giving the name, city and telephone number of the person with whom they wished to speak. Then they awaited their turn to make the call.

A large illuminated map showed fifty-five important cities, one or more in every state of the Union, and it was to these cities that the calls were made. A beam of light on the map showed the path of each call. The souvenir calls, themselves, were made from glass-enclosed booths.
